

Teachers Return To Classrooms For Seminar

Nearly 100 teachers from schools throughout the Southland return to the classroom this summer for a two-week business workshop at the Southern California Gas Company's Los Angeles headquarters.

The sixth annual "Business in Action" seminar, sponsored by the Southland utility in cooperation with the In-Service Training Section of the Los Angeles Board of Education, is conducted at the gas company's downtown offices.

Designed to provide educators with up-to-the-minute information on the organization, operation and responsibilities of modern business, the two-week conference will be highlighted by field trips and tours of the gas company's facilities.

INCLUDED WILL be a tour of the Channing St. customer service training center; a view of purchasing, warehousing and shop procedures at the gas company's general warehouse in Pico-Rivera; a field trip to the underground gas storage project at Playa del Rey and a visit to a transmission pipe replacement job.

In addition, assembled educators will view varied items of special equipment, including batteries of electronic data processing machines, electrostatic painting facilities and scientific research laboratories.

PROJECT LEADER of the teacher contingent is William E. Rourke, chairman of the business department at Mark Twain Junior High School.

Purpose of the two-week seminar is to underscore advantages of America's free enterprise system and to inform Southland youngsters through their teachers of the activities and opportunities afforded by modern business.

The first "Business in Action" seminar was presented by Southern California Gas Company in 1956, following months of close coordination with school officials. The material covered in the conference is well adapted for classroom presentation, and educators completing the course are eligible for two university credits.

Supervisors Cite Carson Civic Leader

A resolution by Supervisor Burton W. Chace honoring John D. Calas, who has served as president of the Carson Chamber of Commerce for the past six consecutive years, has been approved by the County Board of Supervisors.

Chace said the engrossed scroll will be presented to Calas at a Chamber of Commerce dinner in July.

A civic and business leader in the Carson area since 1933, Calas has served on numerous committees and associations. He was recently appointed by Supervisor Burton W. Chace to the Los Angeles County International World's Fair Committee as well as to the Regional Library Advisory Council for Region No. 3 of Torrance.

He is also a charter member of the Carson Chamber of Commerce and is one of three in the chamber's history to receive a solid gold Life Membership award, the other two being Supervisor Chace and the late Wallace Reynolds.

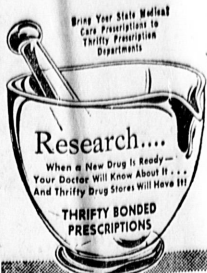

Calas and his wife, Kay, are the parents of five sons.

John Cooper Gets Degree

John Edward Cooper, 617 W. 215th St., was among the graduates of Arizona State College this week when degrees were awarded by the desert state school. Cooper received a Bachelor of Science degree in engineering.

The school graduated a record 630 students, eight of whom were from the Torrance area.

The beauty of the Bougainvillea vine can be enhanced if the gardener keeps it on the dry side during bloom. Overwatering this showy specimen seems to make the colorful bracts less vivid, according to the California Assn. of Nurserymen.
